Tonal control is the measure of the image's brightness, or "tone." While older versions of Photoshop would make tone adjustments using tools such as the Shadows, Midtones and Highlights sliders, recent versions of Photoshop give you the chance to create tonal adjustments using layers. Photoshop is an easy program to learn if you start slow. The controls are very intuitive and Photoshop can be started up and running with little trouble. Adobe Photoshop is one of the most essential programs for digital artists. Its many tools allow you to create beautiful pieces with a single mouse click, and they can also be used for powerful retouching effects. Coated articles are known in the art for use in window applications such as windshields, insulating glass (IG) windows, monolithic windows, and/or the like. Generally, coated articles are utilized where protection from the elements, such as weather, thermal energy or protection against mechanical damage is desired. For example, monolithic windows are typically utilized for offices, schools and buildings where the safety and security of occupants is of concern. IG window units are useful as windows in homes, apartments, and/or the like. Conventional exterior vehicle windshields have been comprised of glass substrates that have been coated with multiple layers in order to enhance the resistance of the windshield to damage due to impact, e.g., by falling objects. For example, such windshields can be made from glass substrates that have been coated with an IR-reflective layer, such as those described in U.S. Pat. Nos. 5,736,426, 5,985,552 and 5,609,861. Additionally, such windshields can be made with an impact-resistant layer, such as an SAFT (SAM-diamonds in a fluorinated matrix) layer. Examples of such windshields may be found in U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,158,921, 5,782,714, 5,936,026, 6,159,356, 6,569,153, 6,569,154, and 6,551,936. However, in order to meet the current SMART GLAZ (Silver Mica Reflective/Low-E Glass System for Automotive Windshields) requirements of the automotive industry, including Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard (FMVSS) No. 218, the coated article used for an automotive windshield must satisfy certain optical characteristics as well as provide safety and security benefits. Human papillomavirus type 16 transcription and capsid protein expression in a cervical cancer cell line. Human papillomavirus (HPV) has been implicated in the causation of cancer of the cervix. However, only one cell line, Caski, is currently available for studies of HPV biology. In this study, we have examined the expression of the early (E) 1 and E2 genes and the low and high molecular weight proteins of HPV-16 in the Caski cell line. Our results show that the expression of HPV-16 early genes coincides with the progression of the transformation of cells in culture and with increasing levels of HPV-16 E1 protein. The expression of E2 mRNA in the Caski cell line does not correlate with that of the E2 gene transcription product. The results of these studies suggest that HPV-16 E2 protein is not involved in the induction of early gene expression in transformed cells and that the expression of E2 mRNAs may be due to increased stability of E2 mRNAs in the transformed cell. The present invention relates to a display device. For the display of information, such as information from a computer screen or television screen, several flat panel display technologies are used, including the cathode-ray tube (CRT), liquid-crystal display (LCD), organic light-emitting diode (OLED), plasma display panel (PDP), and field-emission display (FED). Among these known technologies, the CRT is probably the most popular and the LCD and OLED in the former places. All of the conventional flat panel display technologies suffer from several drawbacks, however. In particular, the CRT is typically bulky, and has high power consumption and short operating life. The LCD is relatively expensive due to the use of liquid crystal in the display panel, the use of vacuum-sealed panels, and fabrication of the display panels by a photolithographic process, which is complex and therefore costly. The OLED has a relatively low quantum efficiency, and is usually used as a small-sized display device. PDP display panels are typically prone to flicker. The FED is a cold-cathode technology utilizing the electron-emitting emission of electroluminescent phosphors. The FED is a promising display technology. However, the display performance of FED is only a few hundred lines of resolution, and a relatively high operating voltage. Moreover, the FED suffers from high power
